First step, “making friends cross-culturally”

Dear prayer partners,

Greetings in Christ.

Who is my neighbor (Luke 10:29)? Even though we are living with all kinds of strangers in this global village era. Especially since I live in California, where my block has such diverse neighbors. Do I make friends among them? I ask this question constantly. I would like to share some stories in this newsletter about the intercultural aspects of Mission in the North American setting.

Evangelia University hosted Hispanic pastors very first time. They are members of Hispanic pastors Association in Orange County. They were seeking a place to meet regularly (every 3rd Tuesday of the month), we (picture left--President Kim and me) welcomed them to use our facility. I pray that our relationship grow and the institution can cater further like seedbed for life-long ennancement of retraining Hispanic local pastors and lay leaders to strenthening local Hispanic churches in OC area.

Thanksgiving worship and orientation

42 student prospects and pastors gathered to celebrate the launch of the multi-ethnic leadership training. Seedbed Filipino church praise teams joined to celebrate their laypeople studying; Agape Hispanic church sent five members to be trained. Koreans, Filipinos, Indonesians, and Hispanic-background Americans gathered together for the sake of the next generations (English-speaking only) in the immigrant churches. Please pray for the expansion of this “prepare next generations” movement among Diaspora churches in North America. 15 students are studying this year in the classroom setting. I pray that this program will expand beyond California's boundaries; hopefully, it can be utilized via Zoom next year. to reach broader audiences.

“Whom should I send as a messenger to this people? Who will go for us?”
I said, “Here I am. Send me.” (Isa 6:8)
Can you join us to pray for this upcoming Kairos mission training: 1) that churches will be willing to respond to the missionary calls, 2) that it will draw mission-minded people's attention and interest.
